Karen Bowman is Director, Communications & Programs.

Career and research highlights:

Karen has worked in both public and private sectors in British Columbia and Ontario for over 30 years, successfully managing her own small business for more than a decade. Karen combined her background in business administration and consulting, project management, marketing and communications with personal experiences to develop several successful road safety education programs offered through the Drop It And Drive® (DIAD) program which began operating under the auspices of TIRF in January 2017. Since 2010, DIAD has delivered its effective, interactive education programs to more than 60,000 workplace and school-based audiences across North America. DIAD corporate clients value the individual customization of each seminar which ensures they are tailored to meet and exceed corporate workplace safety and social responsibility goals while helping support individual corporate safety cultures. The DIAD school programs are tailored to meet the needs of a wide range of ages and include practical information on personal safety choices about distracted driving and distracted walking while empowering their young audiences to share life-saving information with their families.

The interactive style of the DIAD program helps achieve behavioural change through imparting knowledge, science, and practical, usable tools in a highly efficient and engaging manner. DIAD programs are well-known across multiple sectors and industries for their current content, expertise in road safety issues, both within the workplace and the communities in which they travel, as well as practical implementation strategies to address distraction-related workplace risks from an occupational health and safety perspective. She actively tracks new research, knowledge and initiatives related to road safety, with an emphasis on distracted driving, through her network of contacts across several countries.

Karen is a regular speaker at industry and national safety conferences and is frequently called on by the media for comment on issues related to distracted driving and road safety.
